A KNOCKDOWN

Grand Master Sweeney Gets It from a Nickel-Plate Man's Fist.

Dissatisfaction Because the Strike Has Been Declared Off.

Sheriff Beck Asks Gen. Porter to Withdraw the Outside Troops.

Rainy Night in Camp—Sweeney a Witness Before the Board of Arbitration.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.
BUFFALO, Aug. 25.—At 10.50 o'clock at the corner of Swan and Main streets a crowd of switchmen surrounded Master Workman Sweeney, demanding that he declare a strike from New York to Chicago.
Words ensued and Switchman Quinn, of the Nickel Plate yard, struck Master Workman Sweeney a terrific blow, knocking him down.
Blood flowed in a stream from Sweeney's head.
Quinn got his leader's head against a telephone pole and punched and pounded him until pulled away.
The quick covering of Quinn and his rapid disappearance is construed by some observers as an evidence that the assault was premeditated. Some believe that the men who found this morning that they could not resume their old positions, came upon for protest, and possibly for physical satisfaction against Mr. Sweeney for having declared off the strike.
Mr. Sweeney's hat was picked up and put upon his head by a bystander, and he was taken to a drug store where his injuries were attended to. He himself gave the name of his assailant to the Associated Press, and stated that Quinn was complaining of having lost his job.
A crowd had gathered very quickly, and even after Mr. Sweeney had been taken away remained to discuss the affair and view the great splashes of red upon the sidewalk where Mr. Sweeney had stood after his injuries were received.
The encounter and the temper of the men who attended the Arbitration hearing this morning disclose a degree of feeling which had not before been known.
Just before the assault on Sweeney, which took place at the close of the Arbitration Board's session, a correspondent said to one of the strikers:
"Well, are the men glad the strike is off?"
"No, they are not, and the strike is not off," responded one of the men. He was about to say more, but one of his fellows poked him sharply with his elbow and he only said: "Oh, it's all right. The strike is off."
Quinn has not been arrested for his assault on Sweeney.

SWEENEY AS A WITNESS.

He Tells the State Arbitration the Origin of the Strike.
BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.
BUFFALO, Aug. 25.—At 10.35 this morning the State Board of Arbitration resumed its hearing into the causes and circumstances of the late switchmen's strike. A few of the recent strikers were present as spectators.
Mr. Sweeney was sworn as a witness and stated that he had received at his home in Chicago notice from the Buffalo switchmen that the men would in future be worked upon a per hour basis, and requesting his presence. Mr. Sweeney came and ordered the formulation of grievances and presentation. This course having failed, Mr. Sweeney visited the railroad managers involved. The Lehigh and Reading system had refused to treat with the switchmen's representatives.
Mr. Sweeney then saw Mr. Lamm, of the West Shore, who took a negative position at the outset and maintained it. Mr. Walters, of the Erie, would give no definite reply, and Mr. Bell, of the Western New York and Pennsylvania road refused Mr. Sweeney to enter the office of the road.
"Did the New York Central refuse to confer with representatives of your order?" asked Counsel Hynes.
"I had no reason to know, because I do not represent any men on the Central system."
"You mean it is a non-union road?"
Chairman Purcell asked how it came that men struck at Rochester, Suspension Bridge and Niagara Falls.
"Those men offered their moral support, that's why those men struck."
"You did not send any men or delegation to those plants to get men out?" asked Mr. Hynes.
"No, I did not."
It will be remembered that when a partial strike was inaugurated at Suspension Bridge it was claimed by the Central that a party of Buffalo strikers appeared in the yards at the bridge at 3 o'clock a. m. and urged out four men.

Mr. Sweeney was asked to name the roads where men struck for cause, and he said the Lehigh Valley, Buffalo Creek, Erie, Central and West Shore. The sympathetic strikers, he said, were from the Lake Shore, Nickel Plate, W. N. Y. and Pa., Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh and D. L. and W.
The hearing then adjourned until 2 o'clock.

DECLARING THE STRIKE OFF.

Grand Master Sweeney's Midnight Words to the Reporters.
BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.
BUFFALO, Aug. 25.—Grand Master Sweeney, head of the Switchmen's order, at midnight last night officially declared that the recent strike had been declared off. Today the men are trying to get back in their old places. Some of them will do so. These efforts and their results, and the movement or non-movement of the troops, are to be the feature of to-day's developments.
Mr. Sweeney will be examined by the State Arbitration Board.
The troops had last night a soaking rain or a drizzle, constantly, and the weather is heavy to-day.
Mr. Sweeney's action in declaring the strike off followed his conference with two parties of men. The first consultation was with the chiefs of other railway organizations who were in the city, and it disclosed the futility of further effort towards bringing about a general strike. The second consultation was with the local strike committee of the switchmen.
After leaving the first conference Mr. Sweeney went to the room of Arbitration Commissioner Donovan and informed him of the result.
"In view of the result of your conference and of mine with the railroad officials, I recommend to you that the strike be declared off and thereby secure a return to work of as many men as possible," said Mr. Donovan.
Mr. Sweeney was undecided, but after a long discussion, in which the whole situation was reviewed and Mr. Sweeney had stated that he was not beaten and yet yet crippled all the trunk lines between New York and Chicago, the Grand Master finally decided that the suggestion of the Commissioner and the recommendation of the heads of labor organizations during the conference that the most advisable thing to do was to declare the strike off were wise.
Reporters saw Mr. Sweeney later at his room. A small stand in the center of the room was surrounded by the group of labor leaders. Mr. Sweeney had before him a litter of stationery and messages.
"The Master Workman will say a few words to the press," announced Mr. Moriarty, local head of the switchmen.
The head of the order, sitting upon the table with a pencil, in a ruminant sort of fashion, and in a tone of voice so low as to scarcely be heard across the room, said: "A conclusion has been reached by the duly authorized representatives of the switchmen, and it is that the trouble is ended at midnight to-night. This is all I have got to say, and I don't propose to answer any questions, so you needn't ask any."
Silence fell upon the entire company. The newspaper men stared in surprise for a moment at Mr. Sweeney, and as questions were about being put by several, he added: "Four hundred and fifteen switchmen can't fight 8,000 troops and four or five railroad companies."
"There are more switchmen than 415," shot in one of the correspondents.
"Yes, about 515 are out now," corrected Mr. Sweeney. "And if any men had a grievance those men did."
"We are a little disgraced, but still in the ring," interjected Officer Barrett, of the switchmen's order.
"Sh," commanded Mr. Sweeney, and then he added as the newspaper men withdrew, and in answer to an inquiry: "I have nothing to say as to whether there will be a federation of railway orders or not. You will probably give us credit for making a stiff fight, if we are beaten."
"Will any of our men be taken back by the roads?" asked a retiring correspondent.
"The roads need trained, skilful help, and they certainly cannot get any better men than these," was Mr. Sweeney's response.
The word was carried out towards the East Buffalo yards at once by messengers, and before dawn the idle switchmen knew they were at liberty again to seek work where they could.
It is estimated by Arbitration Commissioner Donovan, who has called upon the railway officials in behalf of the men, that nearly 50 per cent of the now idle switchmen will be re-employed. It is probable that the outside troops will be speedily withdrawn, the local militia being left to furnish such further protection as may be necessary.

Yours respectfully, AUGUST BECK, Sheriff."

DID PRICE PLAY THE RACES?

The Alleged Defaulting Cashier Said to Have Gambled.

His Manner of Living Was Far Beyond His $5,000 Salary.

ALFRED J. PRICE, the alleged defaulting cashier of Street & Smith, publishers of the New York Weekly, at 31 Rose street, who has been committed to the Tombs in default of $5,000 bail, seemed quite reconciled to his imprisonment when seen by an EVENING WORLD reporter this morning.
The specific charge against Price, as told in THE EVENING WORLD Sporting Extra yesterday, is the theft of $200 from his employers July 1 last. But when arraigned before Justice McMahon, at the Tombs Court, Ormond G. Smith, a member of the firm, informed the justice that although the actual charge against Price was for a stealing of $200, the books of the firm showed a deficiency of over $20,000, and that $7,000 of this amount could be traced to Price.
A great deal of speculation is indulged in as to the motive which might have actuated Price in his alleged misappropriation of his employers' money.
Price is an Englishman, forty-three years old, tall and grained, and possesses the refinement seemingly of a thorough gentleman. He has bushy-gray eyes and very light hair and mustache. He lived with his twenty-three-year-old wife and two children at the La Grange, 1 East Eighty-third street. His wife is a very pretty and amiable Connecticut woman. They were married three years ago.
The style of Price's living at the La Grange, although it far exceeded the limits of his income—$5,000 a year—excited no suspicion among his neighbors, who believed that he was a member of the firm of Street & Smith.
The rent of his apartment was $1,000 a year, and everything else was proportionately expensive.
Every day Mrs. Price and her mother drove out in an equipage, and Price himself was frequently seen handling the reins over a fiery team.
From all these evidences of luxurious living on a salary of $5,000 a year it is supposed by some that the sole motive for Price's alleged pecuniary misdeeds was the desire with which he surrounded his domestic life.
There is another rumor afloat, however, which it seems is more apt to have been the cause of the man's downfall.
He is said to have been a heavy bettor on the races.
When seen by THE EVENING WORLD reporter this morning Price refused to either confirm or contradict his story.
Lawyer Edmund E. Price, who was retained by the prisoner's wife, when asked about his client's alleged gambling habits, said: "I have heard that he bet on the races, and I am inclined to believe that the report is true, although I have not yet questioned Price about it."
"If he were a bettor, the lawyer said, he would be a gambler to-day, the lawyer said."
"I scarcely think so," replied the lawyer. "If they heard of Price's arrest, he had been a regular church-goer and was considered a respectable member of the community. He refused to believe in his guilt, and maintain that there must be some mistake."
Price's arrest was a surprise to all who knew him. He was a member of the La Grange club, and was a regular at the La Grange. He was a member of the La Grange club, and was a regular at the La Grange. He was a member of the La Grange club, and was a regular at the La Grange.
The couple employed three servants and a nurse, and people who knew them are agreed that they could not have managed to keep up such a style under $15,000 a year.
Price was arrested at his home at Seabright every week, and it was during his days of absence from the office that Street & Smith caused an examination of his books to be made by an expert accountant.
The examination is said to have disclosed a deficit of $20,000. Price was summoned from Seabright yesterday by Mr. Smith, who, after a brief interview in his office, caused him to be placed under arrest by Sgt. James Langan and Detective Canavan, of the Tombs squad.
Price denies his guilt.

EXTRA.
HAMBURG CUT OFF

Cabin Passenger Service to That Port Stopped by Fear of Cholera.

Immigrants to Be Carried on Ships by Themselves.

Noordland, from Antwerp, Found to Have No Infection on Board.

Almost a Panic Caused by the Great Number of Deaths in Europe.

Despatches received to-day at the office of the Hamburg American Packet Company, 37 Broadway, state that the directors of the company have resolved to adopt radical measures to prevent the introduction of cholera into this country by the steamships of that line.
Hamburg, the port of departure of their steamships for New York, is apparently the centre of the cholera epidemic in Europe. The number of deaths from cholera there is reported to be increasing daily, and already roots up into the hundreds.

The company has decided to discontinue the service of fast ships and cabin passengers to Hamburg until the epidemic has disappeared.
The steamships Puerto Bismarck, Normanby, Augusta Victoria and Columbia will ply only to Southampton until further orders, and will carry no immigrant passengers. All immigrant passengers will be brought by separate ships from Hamburg, and no cabin passengers will be taken on those ships.
Cabin passengers desiring to come to New York in this company's ships must board them at Southampton.

By this means, the company hopes to give most efficient aid to the health officials here. Following is a copy of the order issued by the officials of the Hamburg-American Packet Company:
A danger of infection may come from emigrant passengers booked together with first and second class passengers on the same ship, we have decided, in order to secure for our passengers the best sanitary conditions possible, to separate emigrant traffic from first and second class entirely, forwarding emigrants on separate ships exclusively.

Besides, the express steamships will run until further notice between Southampton and New York only, beginning with the Columbia, due from Southampton to-day.

THE FERTILITY IN EUROPE.

Indignation at Official Statement in Hamburg.
BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.
HAMBURG, Aug. 25.—The papers here which have been accused of greatly exaggerating the situation turn on the authorities to-day and attack them for persistently denying the presence in Hamburg of Asiatic cholera until the violence of the outbreak made concealment no longer possible. They claim that if the authorities had admitted at the start that the disease was true cholera sanitary measures might have been enforced that would have prevented the spread of the disease to the extent which it has now reached.

Mr. Petersburg, Aug. 25.—Advice received here from Astrakhan, on the Volga, shows that the cholera, which has been ravaging that city, has lost its epidemic character.
Mr. Petersburg, Aug. 25.—The official cholera report yesterday showed 5,679 new cases and 2,743 deaths.

The disease is spreading in this city, but the death rate is smaller. The doctors say that the disease is less virulent in its character, and that in addition to this the number of deaths has been lessened by the better arrangements for the treatment of patients.
One reason why the people of St. Petersburg do not get panic-stricken is that European and perhaps also Asiatic cholera is endemic in the city, an average of 3,700 deaths annually resulting.

Paris, Aug. 25.—The condition of many of the emigrants who pass through this city is such that should cholera break out among them it would find a fertile field for its spread.
The committee here state that within a month 1,000 refugees from Russia have passed through Paris, most of whom were on their way to the United States.
Those who have recently arrived here have been in a most filthy condition.

It was found necessary to thoroughly disinfect the premises where they spent the period of their stay here.
ANSWER, Aug. 25.—The excitement caused by the acknowledgment of the physicians that Asiatic cholera is in the city has not subsided, and those who can afford to do so are making ready to flee to various places to escape the disease.

There is no appreciable change in the situation. It is generally believed that the disease reached here from some vessel from an infected port, and there is considerable indignation that the authorities did not enforce the quarantine regulations until after the disease had got a firm foothold in the city.

It has transpired that the first persons to fall victims to the disease were dock laborers. They were taken to the hospitals, where the disease was Asiatic.

TRIED MURDER IN THE SURF.

Some Unknown "Joe" Nearly Drowned Maggie Warner.
BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.
CONY ISLAND, Aug. 25.—Gravestones' detectives are all at work to-day on what has thus far been a fruitless effort to find the attempted murderer of a young woman named Maggie Warner. Shortly after midnight a woman staggered up to Policeman Michael Taney, at Eighth street and Surf avenue, and asked to be told the way to police headquarters.

The woman's clothes were dripping with water, her long, black hair was hanging loosely, and the officer concluded she had been drunk and had fallen into the ocean. He took her to the station-house and just as she started to tell her story to Sgt. Potter she fell fainting to the floor.

A policeman started to drag her to a cell, but before he raised her from the floor big chief McKane stepped in and, with a rebuke to the policeman, carried the woman to an upstairs room.

Meantime Dr. Hill had been sent for, but with his efforts it took nearly half an hour to revive the woman. Her first cry was: "Save me, Joe! Oh, save me! Oh, don't drown me!"

Since then her talk has been hysterical, with only now and then a coherent phrase. The mystery is made the more interesting by the woman's respectable appearance. Her dripping clothes were of excellent material and make, and her face, though not beautiful, is not that of a dissolute woman. She looks to be about twenty-five years old, and in one of her statements spoke of having been married and divorced.

About noon she spoke intelligently, and said she lived in Quinby street, Brooklyn. She would not state the street number, and begged to be let go. Detective Chamberlain offered to take her home if she would give him the proper address, but before an answer could be made she became hysterical again and cried for life-saver Capt. Hildman to help her.

The theory of the police is that she and the man named Joe came to Cony Island yesterday evening and had quarrelled while together on the beach. The officers do not believe Miss Warner has been drinking, but Detective Chamberlain has just stated that from the woman's hysterical talk he believes the name of the man who attempted to drown her is Joe Fredman, and that he is a New York City broker.

Dr. Hill was of opinion this morning that the woman would recover, but stated at noon that she was in a critical condition. He contradicted the statement of the police, that she had not been drinking, and says that she was intoxicated.

Margaret Larkin, of 230 East Thirty-ninth street, and Owen Sloan, a laborer, of 607 First avenue, testified that they witnessed the arrest of Reilly and did not see him used by Sloan as other witnesses described it.
